The Cambridge Humanities Review

The Cambridge Humanities Review is delighted to announce the launch of ISSUE 17, which includes articles on sweet peas and sexual ethics, cats and Adam Curtis, Foucauldian dystopia, medieval China, and much, much more. This issue is one of our widest-ranging yet, and we are very pleased to feature contributors including the poet and researcher Dr. Laura Kilbride and Oxford philosopher Dr. Rachel Fraser, alongside many other distinguished and emerging writers from the worlds of art history, sociology, and history.

ISSUE 17 is available free of charge via our website!

You can follow the CHR on Twitter @CambridgeChr or on Facebook @cambridgereview.

The Cambridge Humanities Review was established in 2012 as an independent journal of essays, articles and reviews, written by academics, researchers, and upcoming writers. It covers the latest in literature, politics, art, current affairs, theology, history, and architecture amongst many other fields.

Recent contributors, speakers, and interviewees have included literary critics like Sir Christopher Ricks, historians such as Prof. Christine Carpenter, art historians like Sir Charles Saumarez Smith, economists like Prof. Michelle Baddeley, musicologists such as Prof. Laura Tunbridge, and classicists like Prof. Paul Cartledge.

51st St. Gallen Symposium 2022

Since its' founding in 1969 St. Gallen Symposium has been a leading initiative for cross-generational dialogue. Given the current context of unprecedented global crises the symposium provides an excellent and all the more relevant platform for dialogue between today's and tomorrow's leaders.

The Global Essay Competition, the entry ticket to the symposium, gives your graduate and postgraduate students an excellent opportunity to share, sharpen and discuss their perspectives. Once selected, the top 100 participants will have the opportunity to present their ideas in front of an audience of a world-renowned audience.

Please refer to www.symposium.org for further information on our student initiative.
